Optics figures centrally in Descartes' The World, or Treatise on Light, written between 1629 and 1633, as well as, of course, in his Dioptrics published in 1637. It also, however, plays important roles in the three essays published together with the Dioptrics, namely, the Discourse on Method, the Geometry, and the

05 Descartes Optics The Cambridge Descartes Lexicon

Descartes' first published work, Discourse on the Method, lays out a framework for "rightly conducting one's reason and [of] seeking truth in the sciences." It's not a description of the scientific method — of hypotheses and experimentation. Instead, it's a practical philosophy about how to seek truth.
