The New Confessions William Boyd

The New Confessions (1987) is a novel by the Scottish writer William Boyd. The theme and narrative structure of the novel is modelled on Jean-Jacques Rousseau's Les Confessions, the reading of which has a huge impact on the protagonist's life.. The book follows the life of John James Todd from his birth in Edinburgh up to his final exile on a Mediterranean island.

The New Confessions - Wikipedia

The New Confessions is a long and tortuous journey through life and art and the novel is remarkably innovative. It is the most ambitious and intellectual book by William Boyd and unarguably his best. Rumors began to spread through the industry about the film, its revolutionary techniques, of a scale and size matched only by the ambition of its director.

Whilst I thoroughly enjoyed The New Confessions, it was not for me in the same league as Boyd's Any Human Heart - one of the finest books I have read in a long time. This is a lengthy book, another 'fictional autobiography'. I started off well but became a little bored - sometimes confused - in the latter part of the book.
